

Signs of Hearing Loss

For many people hearing loss is a natural, and gradual part of the aging process. Hearing loss can also be caused by genetic medical conditions, ear infections, illness, traumatic injury or prolonged exposure to noise.

Common Problem

Hearing loss is one of the worlds most common health problems, and this is unfortunate because hearing loss and its psychological side effects are highly treated.

Hearing Without Understanding

Hearing loss is not like listening to sounds with the volume turned down. Instead, you may notice that certain spoke sounds like “sh”, “th”, and “f” are more difficult to hear than others. That’s why people with hearing loss often say they can hear people talk but can’t understand what is being said

The Problem Goes Beyond Hearing

While most hearing losses do not cause physical pain, they often have social and psychological effects. These include : breakdown of communication, social isolation, employment difficulties, depression, frustration and loss of self-esteem.

You’re Not Alone

If you are suffering with an untreated hearing loss, you may feel isolated and frustrated – like you are missing out on like. Those around you may be feeling isolated and frustrated too. Its important to know you are not alone. Approximately 1 in 10 people experience hearing loss. Happily, about 90% of these people can be helped with the use of hearing aids.

Todays Hearing Aids Are Different

Hearing aids technology has undergone huge advances, providing sophisticated hearing solutions that meet the demands of active lifestyles. Todays hearing aids are much smaller, some can be virtually invisible and some are able to integrate seamlessly with other technologies such as Bluetooth enabled cell phones or I pads.

Don’t delay, have your hearing evaluated.
