AVIATION
PHOTOGRAPHER

Aviation has always been in my blood as my father was a navigator on B25 Mitchells during the latter part of WW2. My mother was always interested in aircraft as well, so it was a natural path for me.

I got started in aviation photography in 1978 when I worked at Waterkloof airbase for a private company that repaired Mirage III and Mirage F1CZ radars. Naturally I took photos on open days and at airshows, which were spectacular back then. I can also remember taking photos at Rand and Lanseria airshows and hearing the inimitable Brian Emmenis doing the commentary.
